

Gerald attended Boston State College, earning a degree in Business Administration. Upon graduation, he plied his trade as an account executive with MetLife. He spent the greatest part of that tenure developing and implementing life insurance programs that served to plan for both short and long term goals that typically face customers during their normal personal and business life cycles.

Thereafter, he joined a subsidiary of American Express as branch manager for their Boston life insurance division, responsible for growth and profitability of an established agency plant with over 400 agents and brokers. It was this experience that led him to his last and lasting career path transition to where he became an independent Managing General Agent to what now represents a business affiliation with over 150 independent agents and brokers.

As Gerald Jamgochian, LLC, he has enhanced his business profile as a CLU candidate and an Investment Advisor Representative. However, both credentials pale in comparison to the level of success attained as the orchestrator of life insurance placements with a bevy of the industry's most well known and highly thought of insurance carriers. During these many years, Gerald has developed a niche where his expertise and company affiliations have garnered widespread acclaim amongst his peers as the "Go To" individual for both high profile clients and clients with less than usually acceptable medical qualifications. All in all, his professionalism and determination to serve his broker relationship and individual client accounts have gained him the loyalty that bespeaks the extreme level of his professional approach to his craft.
